Workplace charging isn't a fad; it's a movement.

- Electric vehicle adoption is rapidly growing, especially in states like California where gas prices are well over $4 per gallon and the benefit of single-occupancy commuting in the HOV / carpool lane can give back several hours of personal time to an individual every week.
- If you have sustainability initiatives, including electric vehicle charging stations at your workplace is one of the easiest ways to fulfil the program.
- If you're looking for additional benefits to offer to your current and future employees, electric vehicle charging stations are a great incentive.

Here's what some of our customers have to say:

"We are excited about the opportunity to directly support our employees' personal sustainability choices."

– Kelly Shea, Sustainability Program Manager, Symantec

"AMD's charging stations will support the development of the electric vehicle market."

– Tim Mohin, Director Corporate Responsibility, AMD
